EXCLUSIVE Special strike force to target bikies' wealth and drug rackets

GOING

NIGEL HUNT

THE formation of a dedicated Adelaide-based strike team as part of the National Anti-Gangs Squad will intensify the war against outlaw bikies in South Australia. The eight-member team will work with SA police to target the state's notorious bikie gang members and their illegal activities. The team will comprise two senior South Australian detectives, five Australian Federal Police officers and an analyst from the taxation department, who will focus on the tax and income of individual targets.

Federal Justice Minister Michael Keenan will today announce details of the initiative, expected to cost the Federal Government $3.25 million over 15 months. Last night, he said bikies were "violent predators who profit from misery".
